Headwaters...

This morning is pleasantly quiet and overcast, the marine layer providing a hush after a few days of clear skies and soaring temperatures. One of the pluses of living in Sonoma County is that the cool air often sucks into our warm valleys as the sun sets, knocking down extended periods of heat. Although leisurely evenings outdoors often require extra layers, our proximity to the coast ensures the hot days and cool nights so crucial to many of our Sonoma County wine appellations. This natural air conditioning helps create a unique summer landscape of golden hills interspersed with evergreen forests; groves of redwoods and firs surrounded by oaks, madrone, bay, manzanita and buckeye along with hillsides and valleys awash with vineyards. As a result, our cool evenings inspire some of California's finest wines.

The drought is getting serious. Normally, this time of year is still ripe with fishing opportunity, especially if one is willing to travel to the Sierra and the California high country. But over the last four years, the California snowpack has steadily diminished, as it has in much of the Pacific Northwest, and this year it was largely non-existent. This lack has removed the cold melt-off that keeps our streams and rivers cool as we move into summer and now, at the end of June, our Sierra waters appear as they usually do in September and October. Low water levels have caused water temperatures to soar. Our California trout are stressed, and as catch and release fly fishermen we are now required to make hard choices to protect our fisheries.

Warm water contains less dissolved oxygen. That is why, as the fishing season progresses and water levels drop (accompanied by rising water temperatures), our late season trout seek out the white water of riffles and plunge pools. Churning white water contains more oxygen and provides cover and protection. As the water warms, trout become less active and more stressed. Their ability to recover and survive even after the most careful handling by a well-intentioned fly fisherman plummets dramatically. Already reports from the Truckee River and from Lake Davis indicate that water temperatures, especially moving into the afternoons and evenings, are too high to practice successful catch and release. Many released trout are unable to recover.

So what do we do? In these conditions, carrying a thermometer to measure water temperature is imperative. Water temperatures cool over night, and events like thunderstorms can also provide cooler run-off to lower temperatures (and sometimes blow-out streams and rivers). Perhaps we need to consider fishing only in the early mornings, before the temperatures warm with the heat of day. Trout prefer water temperatures in the upper 50 degree range. It is accepted by fisheries biologists that as temperatures approach 68 degrees, trout stress levels rise as the dissolved oxygen in the water diminishes. Water temperatures above 68 degrees seriously impede a trout's ability to recover once released and in fact make recovery unlikely. But we must note that 68 degrees is the high-end cut-off, above which catch and release fishing should not occur. Even water temperatures in the mid 60's are stressful for trout and their chances for survival diminish exponentially with each degree approaching that 68 degree cut-off.

Already there are indications the California Department of Fish and Wildlife may adopt emergency stream and river closures on waters influenced by rising temperatures. This is also happening in Oregon and Washington as troubled trout and salmonid fisheries become impacted by warm water, and has been ongoing for years in places like Yellowstone National Park, where late season water temperatures often invoke temporary closures of rivers and streams to protect stressed trout fisheries. As fly fishermen, many of us care deeply for those beautiful areas that host our obsession and sustain their abundance, and we must decide at what point choosing not to fish is the prudent course of action. It is also important for us to help educate those who do not realize the severity that warm water temperatures impose on our wild trout fisheries. If we are to responsibly interact with our environment, we must take into account the interconnected nature of all things and reduce our detrimental impact whenever possible.

There is a long weekend coming up and we are deciding where to fish. Many of our usual waters are off the table, already too low and too warm. We look to the high country, research and gather reports, hoping to find cooler water and to replenish our spirits with beautiful vistas, some degree of solitude and the sustenance offered through casting a fly. Already it is difficult to fish responsibly. In this early season we can't help but wonder what the coming months will bring, as water conditions continue to deteriorate. This is a perilous year for our trout fisheries. The drought is getting serious.

JULY GENERAL MEETING - RRF Casting Pond

Our July RRF General Meeting will be held Wednesday, July 8th, at the RRF Casting Pond in Dan Galvin Park. It will begin at 6:00 pm. We will enjoy light barbecue fare - hot dogs, sausages, chips, potato salad and the like - and will spend the evening practicing fly casting and socializing. These July evenings are often quite pleasant and we look forward to sharing this one with all of you.

Bring a folding chair if you wish, your fly rods and any beverages you may wish to consume. This will be our last General Meeting until September, when we will welcome Ken Hanley as our special guest speaker. Ken's shows are high energy and embody a love for fly fishing that is dynamic to watch. Make plans now to attend...both our barbecue in July and our September General Meeting (in the Lodge Room of the Santa Rosa Veteran's Memorial Building)...and consider bringing a friend or two.

NO RRFF GENERAL MEETING IN AUGUST!

~ Found and Lost? ~

Steve Tubbs, Ken Magoon, and Paul Matzen are looking for an extra chair, a gray hoody, and a tupperware bowl lid that are missing items from the June annual RRFF picnic.

Please return any of the aforementioned misplaced items.

RRFF Gold Membership

The RRFF Board of Directors has instituted a new level of membership in the Russian River Fly Fishers. We are pleased to announce Jack Vallerga as our first RRFF Gold Member. The Gold Membership level is awarded for a $1,000.00 contribution to the RRFF and forgives all yearly dues thereafter. It acknowledges a significant financial contribution to our club and recognizes those members who wish to additionally support our efforts as we move ahead.

Jack is the oldest active RRFF member who still attends most of our club outings, and was one of the original members when the club was established in 1977. He told me that he has wanted to make this contribution for many years and we are pleased that he has chosen this year to do it. Thank you again, Jack, for your generosity and continued commitment to our organization.

President

Digger Creek Outing

While guiding Greg Jacobs and me on the Sacramento River last November, Lincoln Gray proposed that 10 RRFF members could have a day of fishing the private waters of Digger Creek Ranch at a discounted rate of $100 per angler. It seemed like a worthwhile fishing experience to offer the club, and on June 6 thirteen guys took him up on it. We could begin fishing at 7:00 A.M., so we spent the previous night in various locations within an hour drive from the closest town of Manton. Part of the group (Don Shaw, Jack Vallerga, Ted Morrison, Howard Nakagawa, and Mike Kast) stayed in a Red Bluff motel. Fishing buddies Claude Boulware and Denny Asti, stayed at a family cabin in Manton.

Seven of us extended the fishing days by camping in Lassen National Park from the previous Thursday. This group, consisting of Ed Barich, Chris Castellucci, Tom Magliulo, Mike Kangrga, Doug Mackay and I fished around periodic thunderstorms and minimal hatches, but we all hooked a few nice native browns

Chris Castellucci prepares for rain at Manzanita Lake and rainbows on beautiful Manzanita Lake. Fortunately, the weather was clear and sunny in the Manton Valley on Saturday.

Ken Magoon with a 17 inch Manzanita Lake rainbow

The owners of Digger Creek are concerned about anglers possibly introducing the Zebra and Quagga Snails that have invaded California into their water. Consequently, we were required to only wade-fish from the bank on a 2 acre shallow upper lake and a 6 acre deeper lower lake. Both are nicely landscaped and the upper lake had a very comfortable lodge with a lawn from which we could see a few 24 to 30 inch rainbows cruising the edges.

Jack Vallerga, Dennis Asti, Doug Mackay, Ken Magoon and Tom Magliulo relaxing on Digger Creek Lodge deck

In spite of the appeal of this setting, ten guys went with the fishing adage that the “biggest fish must be on the other side of the river or the other lake” . . . so they went to try their skills on the fishier looking lower lake.

That left Ted, Howard and me fishing the “lodge” lake. I felt confident since Ted had landed a seventeen inch fish while the rest of us were putting our rods together. I had cast a large flying ant in front of several big casually cruising rainbows, when one sped up and grabbed it. After a few short runs and an energetic battle in 3 to 5 foot water, I landed a beautifully proportioned 4 to 5 pound healthy hybrid rainbow.

Over the next hour, Ted and I landed 2 more nice fish each. Howard graciously landed and photographed a second big one for me. Around noon they decided to check out the action on the lower lake. I stayed, since I was doing well with ants and now had the lake to myself. I was rewarded by hooking two additional 18 to 20 inchers. Then curiosity, in addition to remembering that I had Doug’s lunch, urged to me drive the mile to join the rest of the group (there was no cell service in the valley).

I was elated by the morning’s fishing, but then learned from somber companions that they either hadn’t hooked any fish or that they were smaller. Most of them quickly left for the upper lake. After another hour of watching Ed, Chris, Claude and Denny get grabs from 16 inch fish on a variety of flies, we all headed back to the lodge.

Claude Boulware plays lower Digger Creek Rainbow hooked on a Yellow Humpy

Fortunately, by around 5:00 P.M. most guys had hooked one or more bigger rainbows by sight fishing with ants or midges under indicators. Claude and Denny expressed satisfaction at casting to a nice fish and having it grab.

Don hooked a couple of big fish on ants. Doug had success with green woolly buggers. Mike Kangrga said he battled the largest trout he had ever hooked on a fly.

Lincoln had told me that a 9 pound fish had been landed at Digger Creek the weekend prior to our outing. I guess we did hook a couple in the 3 to 7 pound range. Some of our group said they would go back while others probably won’t return. Digger Creek offers a very scenic setting and the lakes, lodge, and fish are in beautiful condition.

RRFF Swap-Sell Table

Do you have lots of flyfishing gear that you know you will never use? How about extra rods, reels, fly lines, waders,...? Why not consider sharing your bounty with other RRF members who are new to flyfishing or just getting started (with their own collections)?

Bring your surplus fly fishing stuff to any of our RRF General Meetings and lay it out on a table. Have in mind what you would like to get for it and see if somebody else can use it. Perhaps you could even trade for that special item that has always eluded you...

It's a lot easier than searching Craig's List or EBay and your extra gear may be just what another RRF member has been looking for!.

Online RRF Dues Payment

Our RRF Webmaster Mike Spurlock is working to set up a Membership Renewal capability on our new website. Once this is completed, you will be able to make your yearly dues payments online rather than having to mail everything in to our membership director, Ken Young. Mike is also getting ready to introduce a new trip sign-up feature that will be interactive and allow those members signed up for a particular trip to coordinate meals, etc. between themselves. Mike is having a lot of fun with this and would love to hear feedback on your experience with the RRF website. Thanks Mike!
